

An important message to residents of the Noosa area

Come and help your local volunteer branch of Cancer Council Queensland

The Cancer Council Queensland is a volunteer organisation, founded by volunteers and to this day relying on over 2000 volunteers to undertake many and varied tasks on our behalf. We are not a government organisation and are not government funded. Integral to Cancer Council Queensland's ability to undertake its work in the community is our volunteer branch network. There are over 50 volunteer branches throughout the state.

The Noosa branch is looking for new members and we would love for you to help.

If you are seeking an outlet for your skills and energy, we need you. If you have a passion for the fight against cancer and the energy to help raise the funds necessary to continue the fight, please contact us to find out more about what your local branch does.

We are also seeking suitably qualified local residents to fill a branch executive role, please contact:
